

Abstract

The Study of "Preparedness for the establishment of living security in the old ages of officials of the Permanent Secretary of the Prime Minister' s (OPM) Office" aims to study and describe the viewpoints of the sampling on their preparedness for living security in the old ages in term of self – support, family or community assistance, and social or public welfare, The sampling target of this study are 244 officials of the Permanent Secretary of the Prime Minister' s Office who are between 18–55 year of ages. This research was done by descriptive methodology and using questionnaire as data collection tool. The collected data ware analysed by specific statistical software for sociological research using various statistics such as percentage, arithmetic mean, standard deviation and F-test with statistical significant = 0.05

From this case study it is found that the sampling ; which the most are single, female, 36–45 years of age, bachelor degree, working experiences less than 10 years (level 4– 6) and earning ₱ 10,001–20,000 salary, have the viewpoints on preparedness for living security in their old ages in moderate level. Overall study describes that the sampling points of view on their living security establishment can be orderly described as follow ; self-support, family aid, community assistance and social/public welfare respectively. To investigate their. Preparedness for living security when becoming the elderly, especially in aspect of income, health and family, the sampling group moderating prepares for their health security as the first category. The second is the security of their incomes and the third is social security preparedness.

In order to create well – prepared living security in the old ages for the officials, this study suggests that OPM executives, personnel relations and welfare division in particular, should initiate a policy to encourage then staffs to realire on the importance of their own preparations after retirement. Furthermore, The OPM should promote the well – being and good physical and mental health as well as the saving plan that could help their staffs to get a good live after retirement.