

Woraphot Thamniab 2006: Factors Related to Health Promoting School Development Cooperative Behaviors in Laem Sing District, Chanthaburi Province. Master of Science (Health Education), Major Field: Health Education, Department of Physical Education. Thesis Advisor: Associate Professor Ranumas Ma-oon, Ph.D. 183 pages.
ISBN 974-16-2656-8

The purpose of this descriptive research was to study factors related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors in Laem Sing District, Chanthaburi Province. The samples, selected by purposive sampling, were 35 health promoting school committees, 231 students and 231 students' parents of Wat Nhong Chim School. The research instruments were the questionnaires developed by the researcher and their qualities were tested and accepted. The data analysis were made by statistical program for percentage, mean, standard deviation, Chi-square test and Pearson's Product Moment Correlation Coefficient.

The major finding were as follows:

1. Health promotion school committee: 1) The health promoting school development cooperative behaviors were at high level. 2) The predisposing factor, which was knowledge about health promoting school, was related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .01

2. Student: 1) The health promoting school development cooperative behaviors were at moderate level. 2) The Bio-social factor, which was education level, was related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .05 3) The predisposing factor, which was perceiving about health promoting school, was related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .01 4) The enabling factors such as instruments, health personal, place and environment and health service accessibility were related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .05 5) The reinforcing factors such as receiving about health information and social support from family, school and community were related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .05

3. Students' parents: 1) The health promoting school development cooperative behaviors were at high level. 2) The predisposing factor, which was perceive about health promoting school, was related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .01 3) The enabling factors such as instruments, health personal, place and environment and health service accessibility were related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .05 4) The reinforcing factors such as receiving about health information receiving and social support from family, school and community were related to health promoting school development cooperative behaviors with statistical significance at the level of .05

Woraphot Thamniab

Student's signature

Ranumas

Thesis Advisor's signature

28 108 12006