The purpose of this research was to study the state and problems in organizing language development enhancement activities for young children in private day care centers in the northern region .

The population of this study were 287 private day care centers in the northern region . The data were collected by using questionnaires , interview and observation .

The findings on the state of organizing language enhancing activities were as follows :

1. The provision of supportive environment for language development

The private day care centers in the northern region set up fairly good child development rooms and/or multipurpose rooms for language development both indoor and outdoor.

2. The supportive operation of language development enhancement activities

The owners of the private day care centers in the northern region moderately supported language development enhancement activities.

3. The organizing of language development enhancement activities for children of 2-3 years of age

The listening activities were most highly organized by the caregivers. Speaking , reading and writing activities were moderately organized.

The problems in organizing language development enhancement activities were as follows :

1. The caregivers lacked knowledge and understanding of organizing language development activities. Whereas the children 's and caregivers ' language at home and in the community was Northern thai dialect , the private day care centers ' official language was Central thai. Communication gap was found between the children who had not yet mastered the Central thai and the Central thai speaking caregivers.

2. The private day care centers had insufficient budgets for organizing the environment , media , and raw materials for language development activities.
