

This research aims to study political and cultural participation behavior of voters in San Pa Tong District, Chiang Mai Province.

Subjects in this study are voters in San Pa Tong District, Chiang Mai Province. Subjects are randomly chosen from different occupations. Data gathered are processed statistically in frequency and by per cent.

Results of the study indicate that voters in San Pa Tong District, Chiang Mai Province have general political participation behavior, for example voting and political discussion, at a high level. However, there is a low level of participation in activities such as joining campaign for applicants or joining political party as member. Political culture of this area is found to be subject type.