THIS thesis is a case study of "Effects of Tambon Administrative Organization on Provincial Administrative Organization". The method used in this study is composed of documentary research, interview, and questionnaire techniques. The documentary research includes books, articles, laws, by-laws, and official documents. The interview method consists of selected relevant local officials, such as members of provincial council of Ubonrachadhani, officials of Ubonrachadhani Provincial Administrative Organization (PAO), especially the PAO clerk, as well as some prominent members of Tambon Administrative Organization in Ubonrachadhani Province. The questionnaire technique is composed of 40 questions to ask 180 people who reside in Two Tambon Administrative Organizations (TAO), Tambon Pratoom and Tambon Hua Rua. In this connection, The simple random sampling technique was used to the questionnaires of 180 people. The study indicates problems and obstacles of the local government units to be solved. Again, it is recommended that the study is a guide-line of future study on local government in Thailand.

The study finds out that (1) the responsible areas of the Tambon Administrative Organization and the Provincial Administrative Organization are duplicated with each other, and (2) the TAO generally has low income to run its own business. Finally, the study recommends that the PAO should be abolished, and replaced by the TAO and the TAO should be improved in so far as financial and technical assistance are concerned.
