From this research, I study the important factors that affect the success in policy implementation to protect crime of Police community Relations and learn to know what ways that PCR policy implementation can adapt and apply in the suitable area. In this case, I study in field research by using two kinds of questionnaire as a device to know the opinions of policemen and people in Huamark District.

From this research it is found that the factors in characters, implementators, organization resources and participation of people are resulted in the success of Community Relation Project ; moreover, the factors in the policy side ; especially, in the assimilation and the clarity of policy including the fostering from staff organization in the dependence between the staffs and officers ; coordination and some supports from the higher level in police department are related to the success of PCR project. However, the implementation should be improved the way to practice in suitable area and people for making this policy to be the highest successfully effective and efficient in the future.
