The purpose of this research was to study the effects of teaching by using synectics model on the creative prose writing ability of mathayom suksa three students compared with teaching by using teacher's handbooks. The samples of this study were 60 mathayom suksa three students studying at Queen's College (Triam Udom Suksa Rajburi School) in Rajburi province. The subjects were divided into two groups. Each group consisted of 30 students. The first one was the experimental group taught by using synectics model and the second was the controlled group taught by using teacher's handbooks. The instruments consisted of the creative prose writing ability test, lesson plans for teaching creative prose writing and criterion for evaluating students' creative prose writing. Both groups were taught 12 periods by the researcher for 6 weeks. The creative prose writing ability test was administered to the samples after the experiment. The results were analyzed by arithmetics means, standard deviation and t-Test.

The result of this study indicated that the ability in creative prose writing of mathayom suksa three students taught by using synectics model was higher than the other group taught by using teacher's handbooks at the .05 level of significance.
