The objective of this research was to study the roles of monks at Wat Chollaprathanrangsarit in social development, emphasised in teaching at educational institutions, social welfares and spreaded Dharma.

This research was using grouping-type as a sample and the anthropological research method such as participant observations in-depth interviews and informal interviews based on the following assumptions :

1. The monks who taught in the educational institutions played the roles on social development more than those who did not teach in the educational institutions.
2. The monks who worked as social workers played the roles on social development more than those who did not work as social workers.
3. The monks who spreaded Dharma played the roles on social development more than those who did not spread Dharma.

The findings of the research were in accordance with the above assumptions excepted assumption 3.
