This research on the Election Method of Chief Executive Officer of Provincial Administration Organization aims to examine opinions of government officials and local politicians. The investigation is made in order to know which election method of the Chief Executive Officer of Provincial Administration Organization, direct or indirect methods, that they are likely to prefer. The study is based on primary sources, i.e. questionnaires completed by so respondents who are government officials and local politicians.

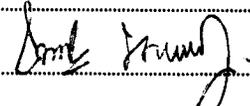

The result of the study indicate that both the government officials and the local politicians tend to agree to employing and the local politicians tend to agree to employing a direct method in electing the Chief Executive officer of Provincial Administration Organization rather than adopting an indirect one. It is important to note that the mean value of opinions for local politicians who agree on using a direct method is higher than that of government officials.
