ABSTRACT

The purposes of this investigation were to study work performance and work problems on the inquiry of criminal prosecution. A set of questionnaires was developed to collect data from 116 inquiry officials. One hundred and thirteen sets of responded questionnaires were applicable for data analysis. A computer program was applied to calculate percentage, arithmetic mean, and standard deviation.

The respondents perceived that the inquiry officials performed inquiry policy, planning, and work conduct at the "under average" level, whereas monitoring and evaluation aspects were performed at the "above average" level.

The most significant problems on the inquiry work were financial budget, and material provision. The problems on office building, policy setting, work planning, work structure and personnel were at the "above average" level.
