It is generally accepted that most of Thai people are agriculturists so agricultural products are the main source of their income, this including Commodity Trading by using middle man. As the matter of fact Thailand does not have a real system of Commodity Trading as provided in other foreign countries so from this gap of law, Economic Crime concerning in Commodities Trading are committed. Although, there are some provisions of law such as Thai Penal Code and Emergency Decree on Loans of Money Amounting to Public Cheating and Fraud B.E. 2527 but they are not really enforced.

This thesis has objective to study on Commodity Trading and its effects and research on legal problems for preventive measure in Commodity Trading crime suppressing for better enforced of Criminal Justice Agencies.

The result getting from this thesis shows that the problems on enforcing law of Economic Crime concerning in Commodities Trading are legal provision, mechanical of law enforcement agencies and the efficiency of law enforcers so the suggestion for solving these problems are presented in this thesis.
