This research aimed to study the measure in criminal action which has been prescribed under the law concerning control of environmental pollution; which is the role and appropriate or not, if there is no criminal measures to enforce the problem of causing environmental pollution caused by industrial plants.

The result of the research disclosed that the criminal measures as prescribed by the law concerning environmental pollution, mostly they will have the role as subsidiary measure, which the role in criminal measures to protect environment should not cover damage to environment, and it is found that crimal measure against the problem of pollution by the industrial plants is still ineffective, due to limitation in criteria in criminal offence.

The analyst considers it appropriate to revise the law concerning with control of environmental pollution, especially the enhancement and conservation of national environmental quality act, B.E.2535, which is the basic law, by revising said law to have the prescription in criminal measures and criminal offence in the offence against environment, and facilitate the enforcement of the law.
