

Thesis Title      A Comparison of Self Care Activity Participation
Under Primary Health Care Program Living in the Inner and Outer Areas of Bangkok Metropolis

Name              Miss Sataporn Angpaibul

Thesis Advisors   Assistant Professor Kiatiwan Amatyakul, Ph.D.
Associated Professor Prakong Kanasut

Department      Educational Research

Academic Year    1985 \

ABSTRACT

The purpose of this research were to survey and compare self care activity participation under Primary Health Care program of people living in the inner and outer areas of Bangkok Metropolis and in addition to study knowledge correlation between self care activity participation and some factors influent self care activity participation under Primary Health Care program.

Findings :

1. Significance differences at .05 level were found on self care activity participation of people living in the inner area in all aspects of Primary Health Care program were higher than people living in the outer area.

2. In each aspect of Primary Health Care program, significance differences at .05 level were found on self care activity participation of people living in the inner area in nutritions, immunization and epidermical control, first aid drugs, family planning and mother and child health care were higher than that of people living in the outer area.

3. Significance differences at .05 level were found on self care activity participation of people living in the outer area in environmental sanitation was higher than people living in the inner area.

4. There was relation at .05 level statistically significance differences between self care activity participation and factors influent self care activity participation in age, occupation, health utilized place, source of health information, health education by health volunteers.

5. There was relation at .05 level statistically significances differences between self care activity participation of people living in the outer areas and factors that influent self care activity participation in number of family members, education, income/payment, sickness health volunteer's role interest, health information sources and health suggestions of officers and health volunteers.

6. There was relation at .05 level statistically significance differences between self care activity participation of people living in both areas and factors that influent self care activity participation in number of family members, education, health service payment, health volunteer's role interest and health suggestion of officers and health volunteers.