The right to ask for justice and fairness in police personnel management tends to guarantee merit system and security of carrier for police officers. However, it seems that many of them do not understand the said right both in substantive and procedural aspects.

It has been found in this research that provisions of laws concerning the exercise of this right through the process of grievance and appeal are ambiguous. Moreover, the laws on police discipline, on police personnel management and on civil service personnel management seem to have many discrepancies. It is therefore necessary that laws and regulations related to this right be amended in order to provide clear and efficient protection of the officers.
