The purpose of this research was to investigate the effects of using selected activities on the achievement of communicative English usage of Prathom Suksa six students with low English achievement. The samples were 30 students of Prathom Suksa six in the academic year 1992 from Banchun school, Chun district, Phayao Province. The subjects were divided into 2 groups. The first group was taught by selected activities while the other one was taught by the regular instructional lesson plan activities.

The instruments used in this research were the Communicative English Usage Tests. The data were analyzed by arithmetic mean, standard deviation, and t-test.

The findings were as follows :

(1). The achievement in Communicative English usage of the group taught by selected activities was significantly higher than the group taught by the regular instructional lesson plan activities according to the Ministry of Education at the level of .01.

(2). The achievement in Communicative English usage of the group taught by selected activities was higher than the group taught by the regular instructional lesson plan activities in listening, speaking, reading and writing significantly at the level of .01.

(3). After the experiment, the student's learning achievement of the group taught by selected activities was significantly higher than the experiment group at the level of .01.
