The purpose of this study was to study the expected role and conflicts concerning expected role of large secondary school administrators under the jurisdiction of the department of general education in northeastern region. The study sample consisted of 58 secondary school administrators, 268 department heads, and 378 school teachers who were answered the questionnaire from all 68 schools. The questionnaire form used in this study was divided according to the 6 task areas, namely, 1) academic affairs, 2) business affairs, 3) student personnel activities, 4) service affairs, 5) school-community relations, and 6) general administration.

The results of the study indicated that the secondary school administrators, department heads, and school teachers disagreed in rating the expected role of large secondary school administrators under the jurisdiction of the department of general education in northeastern region and the study also showed that secondary school administrators had role conflicts in all 6 task areas.
