

ABSTRACT

Title Telejustice as the new way for the good governance society : In case of developing the information technology in administrative court proceedings

Field Politics

Name Mr. Kongphop Sukijbumrung Course NDC (JSPS) Class 24

The Administrative Court has its policy in developing information technology for effective case management in order to render justice to people with accurate, swift and efficient approaches. The research on Telejustice as the new way for the good governance society : In case of developing the information technology in administrative court proceedings is the qualitative research on documents which aimed at studying the Justice Strategies of the country, the Administrative Court Strategic Plan, spirit of law and laws as well as theories, concepts and the comparative researches on telejustice especially focus on the practical use of VDO Conferencing in administrative court proceedings. Furthermore, this research is to study the effectiveness, efficiency, problems, obstacles, possibilities and suggestions for the practical use of VDO Conferencing in administrative court proceedings. The research founded that the effective practical use of VDO Conferencing are on the process of fact finding by the court, the contact between the court, the first hearing and the interpreting which should be supported by the administrative court and country policy, law and statues clearly prescribed about the use of VDO Conferencing in court proceedings as well as the effective information technology for case management and VDO Conferencing established in the Administrative Court. In this regards, the use of VDO Conferencing in court proceedings may reduce the amount of unfinished cases of the Administrative Court as well as saving the costs and time, increasing convenience, quickness and efficiency in the court proceedings. Nevertheless, for developing this system, the Administrative Court need to adjust the relevant law such as passing the law or any statues which will be prescribed clearly about the use of VDO Conferencing in administrative court proceedings including the development of information technology, the preparation of the suitable places, equipments, more budget and giving the knowledge about this system for the court officials and the people.