

Abstract

The present thesis is intended to study the application of legal and policy measures, including implementation of relevant agencies in order to solve the shortage of public parks which do not meet the needs of the population due to the ineffective public parks management in Bangkok resulting diminution in public parks values and not consistent with the aims and objectives of its existence for the benefits to the environment.

The study found that the existing measures to manage the public parks regarding the principles of law are just being able to manage only a certain level of public parks and still need to empower the law potential and create secondary legal measures systematically for being conformed to the nature and form of area management. However, due to the unclear and lack of continuity of policy measures including the lack of policy framework and operational guidelines for action in concrete as well as the problems concerning the public services in Bangkok and its officials to apply legal measures correctly and accurately vis-a-vis the spirit of law. By the way, the application of legal and policy measures on public parks management are not successful and still not be able to mitigate environmental problems at the time being.

Therefore, in order to operate the public parks management in Bangkok consistently with its problems, difficulties and constraints of the law, it is necessary for Bangkok to apply completely all legal measures existing in accordance with the regional management pattern and carry out secondary legislation so as clearly and comprehensively as possible to manage the public parks according to each government agency's mission to ensure the accuracy and appropriateness of all measures application and legal enforcement. In addition, government's policies should be consistent with the principles of natural resources management in order to serve as basis of the guidelines or rules to manage the system in the area to be able to practice consecutively and vigorously, including public instruction and understanding in form of operational manual which should be provided rapidly for the government's agencies, its personnel and people in general, based on coordination and implementation of public parks as a public service in order to provide and maintain recreational places, for being a norm which can be linked and integrated systematically under the law enforcement conforming to all measures existing by the way of unity in the most.
