

Self-Discrepancy, Self-Oriented Motivation, and Self Concept: A Segmentation Study of the Breast Enlargement Market for Female University Students in Bangkok

by
Ekkanant Mahaekkanant

A dissertation submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Marketing
May 18, 2007

Doctoral Program in Marketing
Thammasat Business School
Faculty of Commerce and Accountancy
Thammasat University
Bangkok, Thailand

Approved by:

Examiner: Associate Professor Gasinee Witoonchart
Dean, Faculty of Commerce and Accountancy
Thammasat University

G. Witoonchart

Examiner: Associate Professor Dr. Ruth Banomyong
Director, Doctoral Program in Marketing
Thammasat University
Chairperson of Dissertation Advisory Committee

Ruth Banomyong

Examiner: Associate Professor Dr. James E. Nelson
Professor Emeritus of Marketing
University of Colorado at Boulder
Principal Advisor

James E. Nelson

Examiner: Professor Dr. Tasman A. Smith
Professor of Marketing
Thammasat University
Associate Advisor

Tasman Smith

Examiner: Professor Dr. Robert T. Green
Professor of Marketing, Faculty of Commerce and Accountancy
Thammasat University
Faculty Examiner

Robert T. Green

Examiner: Assistant Professor Dr. Kritinee Nuttavuthisit
Sasin Graduate Institute of Business Administration
Chulalongkorn University
External Examiner

Kritinee Nuttavuthisit

Examiner: Dr. Sunchai Anuman Rajadhon
Managing Director, ACNielsen (Thailand)
External Examiner

Sunchai Anuman Rajadhon