

Noppon Akahat 2013 : Maesot City: Problems and Process of Establishment to Special Local Administration Organization in Thailand. Master of Arts (Political Science), Major Field: Political Science, Department of Political Science and Public Administration. Thesis Advisor: Associate Professor Wanlop Rathachartranon, Ph.D. 146 pages.

This research aims to study the process of special local government establishment Maesot City And problems in the implementation of the local government to establish a special Maesot City . Methods studied, a qualitative study, is a step in the process to establish the special local government of the Maesot City . and quantitative research in the study of problems in the implementation of the local government to establish a special Maesot City. Data was collected from in-depth interviews, participate in the observation area, the query and the relevant documents. And analysis of qualitative data with the logical consistency of content and quantitative data analysis using statistical analysis including mean values for the priority of the problem, multiple regression analysis to examine the relationship between the problem and the possibility, analyzed using ANOVA and t - test of the relationship between personal factors, and analysis of the problems. Statistically significant at the 0.05 level.

The results showed that Process to establish to describe the seven steps include: 1) the search and collection of data, 2) to propose or support policies 3) to determine the formulation and policy, 4) the environment in accordance with policy 5) to bring the policy into practice 6) evaluating policies and 7) to the policy change, which is relevant actors, including local government leaders, provincial governor, the power distribution board, the head of parliament, and factors associated with such processes, factor in the potential areas, the local leaders, element of the constitution, element of the government, and external factors, the most common problem is the problem of shifting from the government to run with the establishment, the relationship between the problem and the feasibility of setting up study found that all the problems that affect the establishment, and personal factors related to policy issues, including the maximum organizations, the role of participation in the drive to establish a " Maesot City ".

---

Student's signature

Thesis Advisor's signature