At present, the aim of the health care service is to extend service to tambol and village levels. This implementation will not be successful if there is lack support from key person, espeially Khamnan.

The purpose of the study was to study the roles and responsibilities of Khamnan at this moment regarding community health care service. The study was conducted by library study, observation and interview of 13 Khamnan in Bunpodpisai district, Nakornsawan province.

The result of this study shows that Khamnan have played a role mostly as the county's law providors, but also as liason officiale who are very important in the community health care service. It is recommended that:

1. In giving official information to Khamnan, health care personnel should give the information as detailed documents.
2. In the impenentation, health care personel should have strategies to collaborate with the two local administrators in the community.
