

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This huge research undertaking would not have been possible without the support of many great individuals. I am grateful and indebted to all people involved.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my main advisor, Associate Professor Dr. James E. Nelson for his supervision. He is indeed a remarkable role model. I am indebted to his tireless counseling and time he is willing to provide. His exceptional intellectual and role model as an academic scholar have inspired me to be just like him when I eventually become a marketing scholar myself. Professor James showed me new perspectives on ideas, problem solving skills, analyses, and most importantly, the dedication and passion for the marketing profession that I will much need throughout my career. Thank you again Prof. James for academically “bringing” me up.

A second person I would like to thank is Professor Dr. Tasman A. Smith. Professor Tasman showed me the way to a completely different world, a world of academic marketing that I have grown to love. He provided me with many great academic head starts coming into DPM, without which I would have found myself dealing with excessive frustrations and stresses. Moreover, without his presence and program leadership, full academic dream of DPM colleagues and myself would not have been realized. Thank you professor Tasman for your kindness, generosity, and academic directions that you have given to me.

Third person, I also would like to thank Associate Professor Dr. Ruth Banomyong for his time he always made available to discuss scholarly matters and for his helpful advice in preparing for successful future career.

Fourth, many thanks are due to other committee members: Prof. Gasinee, Prof. Robert, Prof. Richard, and Prof. Krittinee for their interests, questions, and thoughtful comments on my dissertation.

Not forgetting all my colleagues at DPM, you all have made my experience at DPM special and a memorable one. We have shared together many moments of joy, hope, and sadness, which I will never forget. Thank you to all of you. My thank also goes to P Kim for his encouragement and our academic discussions we always exchange.

Last but not least, dad, mom, and lovely sister, thank for your great understanding and marvelous support throughout my time at a prestigious academic institution—Thammasat University.
