According to the white paper, democracy already exists in the country, and, amongst other things, “Chinese Democracy” is one of “socialist democracy” with its own characteristics. With this topic, it shows the major differentiation of “Democracy”, in a term of political system, between the view of the Western world and China itself. How and what make China integrate itself with Capitalism and Democracy, in terms of economic and politics? The scope will cover up from the basic definition of Capitalism, Communism and Democracy, and then bring up to a Development of Chinese Economics history till present China and its integrated economic policy. Apart from those, the analysis of the Chinese perspective towards Democracy and possibilities of future trend will be provided by comparing with the recognition of the Western world. In the conclusion, an explanation will be highlighted on a touch of Chinese of Future that China’s “State Capitalism” will root to the Western Democracy, or whether China may stand tall with the capitalist state and its Democracy in the long run?
