The objective of the study is to obtain the factors affecting the obstacles in the corruption case investigation of the investigators. The subjects of the study are 225 investigation officers of the Corruption Suppression Committee office of the Ministry to the Prime Minister, and police officers of the Corruption Suppression Division of the Thai Royal Police Department. The data were collected through questionnaires. The results of the study are that; the male officers face more obstacles than the female officers, and the officers of the Corruption Suppression Division of the Thai Royal Police Department face more obstacles than the officers of the Corruption Suppression Committee of the Ministry to the Prime Minister.

The author recomennds that there should be training of the cooperation in task performance between the officers of the Corruption Suppression Division and the officers of the Corruption Suppression Committee for effectiveness of the tasks. There should be reduction of overlapping units between the two sections and some parts of the tasks can be manipulated without the separation of the units.
