Opera singer
Cecilia Bartoli
will give a concert in Helsinki on May 20, 2007.

The tickets can be reserved at www.menolippu.fi.

This rare occasion is Bartoli's second concert in Helsinki in the last 15 years!

Born in Rome, Cecilia Bartoli received her voice training at the Conservatorio di Santa Cecilia whilst at the same time being taught and coached by her parents, Silvana Bazzoni and Angelo Bartoli, both professional singers. Bartoli's early career included collaborations with Herbert von Karajan, Daniel Barenboim and Nikolaus Harnoncourt. She has since worked with a host of other acclaimed conductors, including Claudio Abbado, Pierre Boulez, Riccardo Chailly, William Christie, Myung-Whun Chung, Charles Dutoit, Adam Fischer, Christopher Hogwood, James Levine, Zubin Mehta, Marc Minkowski, Riccardo Muti, Sir Simon Rattle, Giuseppe Sinopoli and Sir Georg Solti. Since the beginning of her career Cecilia Bartoli has been an enormously successful concert artist. Her recital appearances have been accompanied by leading pianists such as Daniel Barenboim, Myung-Whun Chung, James Levine, Andrés Schiff and Jean-Yves Thibaudet.

Her concert repertoire comprises secular and religious works and reaches from the earliest Renaissance madrigals to the great orchestral song cycles of the Romantic and Early Modern period. Cecilia Bartoli has also performed in numerous Mozart operas in all of the most distinguished opera houses around the world. She has achieved equal renown in operas by Rossini, Paisiello, Händel and Haydn, amongst others. Perhaps her greatest commitment belongs to early music, which she has brought to the public's attention repeatedly with enormous enthusiasm. Her performances of compositions by Scarlatti, Paisiello, Caldara, Caccini, Vivaldi, Gluck - if only to name some - have helped create a new audience for this repertoire throughout the world.

Cecilia Bartoli
in Finland in May!

Cecilia Bartoli's discography comprises more than 10 complete opera recordings, from Mozart via Rossini to Händel and Haydn, and numerous solo discs. With her award winning "Vivaldi Album", which was released in the autumn of 1999, the artist has enjoyed an astounding success and succeeded in awakening a new interest on an international level in the previously completely unknown operas of Antonio Vivaldi. The "Gluck Album", released the subsequent year, won the Grammy Award for Best Classical Vocal Performance within a few months of its release. Acclaimed by critics internationally, this CD topped numerous Best-of-the-Year lists. In summer 2002, Cecilia Bartoli renewed her exclusive contract with the Decca Music Group which continues this legendary discography. As a first product of this collaboration the 2003 "Salieri Album", recorded with the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, conducted by Adam Fischer, immediately became a best-seller. In au-turn 2005, her latest project, "Opera proibita", was unveiled. With arias by Händel, Caldara and Scarlatti it presents music from Cecilia Bartoli's home-town Rome. In a very short time, this album rose to high positions in many European pop charts and won many distinctions. Her titles include the Italian Knighthood and the French Chevalier des Arts et des Lettres.

Cecilia Bartoli was elected Honorary Member of the Royal Academy of Music in London and Accademico Effetivo di Santa Cecilia, Rome. The 2005/06 season was devoted to extensive concert tours with "Opera proibita" - including a triumphant return to Spain after many years of absence. In addition, Cecilia Bartoli paid homage to Mozart in a few prestigious events, amongst others with the Berlin and Vienna Philharmonic Orchestras as well as the Lucerne Festival Orchestra, conducted by Claudio Abbado.

Introducing the Business Class seat in the Airbus A340

MAKE YOURSELF COMFORTABLE

RELAX YOUR FEET

As soon as the plane has reached cruising altitude, give your legs a brake! The legrest and footplate can be used for additional comfort with the seat in any position. Pull the left lever under your right knee to raise the legrest. The footplate can be folded up and down manually. Pull the right lever under your knee to release the footplate and push it further away.

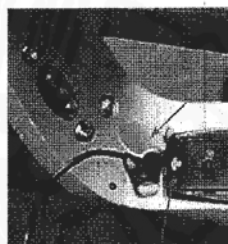

HEAD SUPPORT

You can adjust the headrest manually. Shift it up and down to suit your height. Tilt it forward if you need more support when reading or working, and pull the wings forward to support your head when sleeping.

On the first row, press the button on the centre console to release the TV screen, after the fasten safety belt sign has been switched off.

READING LIGHT

The reading light is turned on and off when you press the button on the lamp.

To release the handset, press on the arrow at the end of the handset. To put the handset back, pull out the cord slightly and it will rewind.

PLUG IN FOR ENTERTAINMENT

The seat is equipped with a power socket for your computer, which may be used when the fasten safety belt sign is switched off. You may borrow an adapter from the crew.

In the armrest there is also a socket for your noise reduction headset, which the crew will hand to you in the beginning of the flight.

HANDSET FOR MUSIC AND VIDEO
See instructions on page 42.

Airbus A340 Entertainment

DURING TAKEOFF AND LANDING

During takeoff and landing the seat has to be in the upright position. All carry-on baggage has to be placed in the overhead lockers, not under the seat in front of you or under your own seat, where it might get trapped and prevent your seat from working when you stretch out the seat.

LEAN BACK AND RELAX

Find the best position to make your journey enjoyable by raising the legrest and lowering your seat as far as you prefer.

The seat can easily be adjusted to different positions during the flight. Press the button to lower the seat. The movement will stop automatically when you release the button. You can sit upright to work and eat, relax down to watch the TV screen, or stretch out in full length or on your side for sleep. Please keep your safety belt fastened when you adjust the seat, otherwise the belt might stop your seat from working.

SLEEP TIGHT

For a good night's sleep, raise the legrest and lower your seat to a position that feels the most comfortable. If you leave the footwell light on, it is easier to see where you step, if you get up during the night.

Button to switch on the footwell light.

ADDITIONAL COMFORT

You can add lumbar support for additional back comfort. Lean forward and press the button to inflate the lumbar support. Press the same button to deflate it.

TIME FOR DINING

To enjoy our delicious meal, raise your seat to the upright position and pull out the table. Your table is located in the armrest. Press the button to release the table and pull it out. The table can be moved forwards and backwards, and it can be rotated to the side so that you can get up from your seat.

GLOBAL CHALLENGES

Giant Mirror/Juliet Linley, Italy

The residents of the small Italian village of Viganella have literally been living in the shadows. Set deep in a valley on the border with Switzerland, not a ray of natural sunlight squeezed past the surrounding peaks from November to February. Dark shadows reigned for more than 80 days back to back. Now, with the help of a giant mirror, they're basking in the glow.

Mit New Technologies/
Jonathan Mann

CNN's Jonathan Mann visits two remarkable inventors at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Both of them are overcoming physical disabilities in unique ways.

- Elizabeth Goldring: A blind poet at MIT has developed an inexpensive way for people with impaired vision to actually see. Goldring has found inspiration in working on her "seeing machine" for ten years. The device projects an image directly onto a person's retina, allowing that person to actually "see" objects such as faces and the layout of unfamiliar buildings.

- Hugh Herr: An assistant professor at MIT has a vested interest in the future of prosthetics. Hugh Herr is a double-amputee. He and his team are working to make prosthetics more 'human'. The prosthetics will not only be able to move like real limbs, but also feel sensations like them.

Carbon Neutral/Daryl Hannah

Climate Change has become one of the hottest topics of discussion in recent months. Scientific reports have suggested more strongly than ever that global warming exists - and that the causes are man-made. A greater emphasis is being placed on renewable technologies like wind and solar power. There are also ways for individuals to offset their 'carbon footprint'. We asked actress and environmentalist Daryl Hannah to explain how it works.

GLOBAL OFFICE

Vietnam and Turkey

This month Global Office looks at emerging economies concentrating on two countries that are being tipped as the next contenders to take their place at the financial top table - Vietnam and Turkey.

Economic Tiger

Vietnam is Asia's second fastest growing economy. In the past five years, it has posted average GDP growth of 7.4 % and attracted big budget investments from big name multinationals like Intel and Nike. In January, Vietnam joined the WTO as its 150th member, ushering in a new era of trade and investment. It seems Vietnam Inc is set to rock... Speaking to overseas companies like Ford and local successes like Trung Nguyen coffee, Kristie Lu Stout investigates how much opportunity there is for a late bloomer and uncovers some of the challenges and advantages of doing business in Vietnam.

Red Hot Stocks

Ho Chi Minh City's stock exchange is one of the world's best performing markets, clocking in a breathtaking 144 % rise last year. As Hanoi plans to release shares of large state-owned firms, the market cap is expected to soar even higher - prompting Merrill Lynch to call Vietnam a "10 year buy". Too hot to handle or an opportunity too good to miss. Kristie Lu Stout joins the throng of hundreds of Vietnamese clamouring to get a slice of the action to find out.

Talking Turkey

With its imminent entry into the EU, Turkey is one of the most talked about countries in the world this year. With a vast population and many highly developed companies it looks set to dramatically change the business landscape in Europe and beyond. In the first of two reports Jim Boulden looks at how tech firms are driving the country forwards.

Keeping It in the Family

Many of Turkey's biggest companies are family-run conglomerates. One of the very biggest is the Dogus Group - run by its charismatic chairman Ferit Sahenk. We profile the company and ask its leader what we can expect from Turkey over the next twelve months.

Latest news from around the golfing world.

Stuart Appleby Interview

Australian Stuart Appleby started on the PGA Tour more than 10 years ago and has carved out a solid career. He's won at least once a year while on the tour and last year collected two trophies. Now ranked 22 in the world and one of the finest strikers of the ball - even he admits he should have won a Major Championship by now. Justin Armsden joins Stuart during his first trip to the Middle East to discuss his career and how he's heavily involved in helping Australia's drought stricken farmers.

The Pete Dye, Sergio Garcia and Greg Norman golf course

Three generations and three of the biggest names of golf are combining their expertise to design a course in Dubai. It'll be the first triple-signature course in the world that will see famous designer Pete Dye and former world Number One Greg Norman team-up with today's young gun Sergio Garcia. Justin Armsden was given exclusive access during their first design meeting where they discussed how the course will look.

The story also looks at the design gold rush going on in Dubai, where Tiger was paid $50 million to put his name on a course.

MAINSAIL

Dubai

This month MainSail visits Dubai, the Gulf state which is becoming a major destination for sailors. During the winter, it played host to America's Cup teams escaping the cold in Valencia and every year it stages the Maktoum Trophy, the Gulf's top fleet-racing series. MainSail presenter, Shirley Robertson, a double Olympic gold medalist, looks at the impressive plans for the future of sailing in Dubai.

Maktoum Sailing Trophy

With prize money up to a million dollars, the Maktoum Sailing Trophy run by the Dubai International Marine Club is growing in stature. This year it has a new 10 day format in a deliberate move to attract more overseas competitors and usher in a new level of competitive fleet racing in the Gulf. Among others, Shirley Robertson meets former winner, Kristian Tzanov, a former moto-cross rider, who now switches between sailing and powerboat racing.

First International Mumbai Boat Show

The commercial heart of India's burgeoning economy gets its first international boat show. With growth around 8 per cent, there's plenty of purchasing power in India and there are plans to open up Mumbai's waterfront and promote water-based activities in the city. CNN's Liz George reports from the show which includes a temporary marina in front of the world-famous monument, the Gateway to India.

Go! Sudoku!

Sudoku is the puzzle phenomenon from Japan, a game that looks like a math problem, but is in fact a twisting puzzler. The rules are simple: start with a grid consisting of nine three-by-three squares in which some of the numbers are already supplied. Fill in the blank squares so that each column, row, and three-by-three grid contains a number from 1 to 9 with none repeated.

■ Biography

One of the most outspoken, creative singer/songwriters of our time returns with her ninth studio album "American Doll Posse" and she's brought company.

"American Doll Posse" features Tori Amos in a way we've never heard her: as five distinct characters who combine to make a complete woman. After centuries of being dismembered, literally and figuratively, by the ruling patriarchy the feminine essence has reassembled to take back the power. In addition to Amos, the quartet creates a compelling portrait of the role of women today expressed through one of Amos's most wide ranging albums, both thematically and musically.

Even Amos was a little undone when the girls started showing up all at once. As usual, the songs began pouring from her now famous Bösendorfer piano which, like a compact you use for all occasions, goes everywhere she does. But this time, something was different: "When the songs come through, I can almost hear them complete," she says. "Normally, they work within a frame. What I began to notice with this, which really got me spinning, was that there were extremes."

Those extremes were different voices, different archetypes, all of which were ready to emerge distinct and intact. Each character came with her own look and fashion sensibility, and each had something very important to say about her role in a patriarchal world and the shackles that had been placed upon her by not allowing her to show all facets of her true self.

Isabel (HiSTORical), a photographer, is a reflection of Artemis and is the most outwardly political of the bunch. She opens the album with "Yo George," a shout-out to our commander in chief, questioning what horribly dark road he and his crooked cronies have led us down, and closes the CD with the anti-war anthem, "Dark Side of the Sun."

Then there's Clyde (ClITORides), who draws from Persephone. She wears her emotional wounds on her sleeve, but remains idealistic. "She is looking at the effects of not being a whole person. She is trying to figure out what she believes in and she is dealing with having been disappointed in her life," Amos says. Clyde is a little girl lost on the string-laden, gorgeous "Girl Disappearing" and on the heartfelt ballad "Roosterspur Bridge."

Pip (ExpiraTORial), who represents Athena, swaggers her way through the driving "Teenage Hustling" and duets with Santa on the rollicking "Body and Soul." "Pip, being the warrior that she is, does confront issues and sometimes it's explosive, but I really love her energy and her casual approach to rubber," Amos says.

Santa (SanaTORlum) relates to Aphrodite and is the sensualist of the quintet. Through songs like the shimmering pop of "Secret Spell" or the wonderfully wicked "You Can Bring Your Dog" or the delightfully retro "Programmable Soda," "Santa is somebody who's a girl's girl," Amos says. "She understands her fellow sisters and she believes that there is enough love and passion out there for everyone. But she won't accept that there is something perverted about being very sensual and she won't drink shame with her sensuality."

And, of course, there's Tori (TerraTORles), who, surprisingly, was one of the hardest characters for Amos to get her head around. "She was Demeter and Dionysus, so she was really holding and channeling the male, as well as Demeter, who was the mother, the creator of this," Amos says. She is front and center as the M-I-L-F on "Big Wheel" and on the dreamy, Lennon-esque married with the Mick Ronson guitar inspired "Digital Ghost."

"What I'm trying to tell other women is they have their own version of the compartmentalized feminine which may have been repressed this in each one of them," Amos says. "It will look different. But because it's based on an ancient feminine personality traits, it exists in all of us and we've really been forced to make a choice, an either/or of only one facet of the feminine."

Even for Amos, who recorded the album in her own: Martian Engineering Studios in Cornwall, England there was something to be learned from these women about being one's authentic self. "For many years I have been an image; that isn't necessarily who I am completely," she says. "I have made certain choices and that doesn't mean that those choices are the whole story. I think these women are showing me that I have not explored honest extensions of the self who are now as real as the redhead."

In some ways, Amos's entire musical career has been leading up to this moment. On many of her past albums, she tackled a single theme. "I was exploring one personality at a time," she says. "So if you look at all the records, I was exploring these character traits, these feminine personality traits, usually in a sonic narrative form. And together, they make the complete woman."

Through the coming months, each woman will have her own blog and her personality will develop as it reveals itself. "You'll get to know the girls through the photographs, through the songs, and there needs to be writings," Amos says. "Their relationships get more complicated. I love the idea of this multimedia project being improvisational. Improv in front of a mass audience...this allows the five women to explore and develop as opposed to them being restrained and contained in a portraiture medium. This way they learn and they grow in front of everybody's eyes."

■ Biography

Avril Lavigne is a girl who knows what she wants. And when it came to writing her eagerly awaited third album, The Best Damn Thing, she had one very clear goal in mind: To make it fun. While touring in 2004 for her last album, Under My Skin, which sold more than 8 million copies worldwide, the Canadian-born punk-pop dynamo found that her favorite songs to play were the faster, more up-tempo songs—so she resolved to make a record that captured the kind of high-spirited, full-throttle energy that she loved to unleash on-stage.

The The Best Damn Thing is brimming with gutsy guitar riffs, instantaneously catchy sing-along party-starting choruses, power pop punk, and rebellious rock 'n' roll attitude. It's a marked departure from the darker, more introspective tone of Under My Skin—and on tracks such as the defiant, riotous, kiss-off-to-a-cheating-boyfriend "Everything Back But You," Avril took pleasure in creating scenarios for her lyrics that weren't, as she says, "straight out of my diary." The result is a collection of songs that reveal just how far she's evolved as a songwriter and singer, from the sassy, empowering "I Can Do Better" (one of Avril's personal favorites) to the irrepressible first single "Girlfriend"—which unexpectedly combines a hip-hop beat with beefy power chords, handclaps, and a chanted girl-group-style chorus with a punk rock twist—to the emotional ballad "Keep Holding On," which she wrote at the request of 20th Century Fox for the studio's fantasy/adventure film Eragon.

As an artist with a keen and well-trained ear for powerful, magnetic pop melodies, Avril was intensely involved in every aspect of The Best Damn Thing's creation: From being fiercely independent while writing her own songs ("I didn't have an A&R guy on this record," she emphasizes. "I knew exactly how I wanted it to sound"), to choosing her producers and musical collaborators, to obsessively going back and tweaking guitar tones and drumbeats in the studio, she worked hard to ensure that it would be her best record yet. The album features the production skills of Butch Walker (who has also produced The Donnas, American Hi-Fi, and Avril's second album, Under My Skin), Dr. Luke (Pink, Lady Sovereign), Rob Cavallo (Green Day, My Chemical Romance, Goo Goo Dolls), and her husband Deryck Whibley (from Sum 41). The process turned out to be a blast: "I didn't know making a record could be so fun," she says. She was eager to work with her good friend Butch again, as she says, "What's great about Butch is that he's a talented artist as well as being an incredible producer." And about collaborating with Dr. Luke, she adds, "Luke and I had a really good connection and chemistry."

The relaxed atmosphere in the studio comes across in the songs themselves—Avril's laughter rings out in "I Can Do Better," and in "Girlfriend" you can hear her, she says, "playing a beer bottle" (by blowing into it) in the last few choruses. Four of the songs on The Best Damn Thing—"Innocence," "Hot," "One of Those Girls," and "Contagious"—were co-written with Avril's former bandmate Evan Taubenfeld. "Evan is one of my best friends in the world," she says, affectionately. "He's been with me since day one."

Of course, all of the spiky, buoyant energy that drives the album will come to life in the live show that Avril is planning for her tour later this year—she has assembled a new band, and is even bringing along two dancers ("I'm doing choreographed dancing for the first time ever," she grins. "It's going to be such a blast").

A great deal has happened in Avril Lavigne's life since she released her debut album, Let Go, in 2002, when she was 17 years old. That album snagged 8 Grammy nominations and four Juno Awards (including Album of the Year and New Artist of the Year), spawned the anthemic hit singles "Complicated," "Sk8ter Boy," and "I'm With You," and sold more than 16 million copies world-wide. Under My Skin cemented the Napanee, Ontario native's superstardom, entering U.S., Canadian, and U.K. charts at #1, unleashing smash singles "Don't Tell Me" and "My Happy Ending," and collecting three more Juno Awards along the way.

In 2006, Avril married Sum 41's Deryck Whibley and branched out into acting, appearing in Richard Linklater's Fast Food Nation and lending her voice to Dreamworks' animated film Over the Hedge. She may be a bit more sophisticated these days, but she's still peerless, and still fearless. The Best Damn Thing is Avril Lavigne at a new stage in her life; she's passed through the shadows of teen angst and emerged in a spotlight, ready to have fun and rock out and yes, even dance. It is, just as she intended, the best damn thing she's ever done.
