ABSTRACT

The purpose of this report is for studying the role of buddhist monks in participation of crime protection in the third provincial police divistion region

The sample groups of this research are the police who working in the third provincial police divistion region which had total amount 280 persons and buddhist monk who had position in abbot, vice-abbot, assistant abbot and priest which had total amount 280 priests. The questionnaires were used for collecting the information and the result of this research are as the following :

From the study, we can summarize that this research sceopts all hypotheises. Eventhough, we bring many factors of background like age, the amount of rainy season, the public service age, position of priest, position, a religious denomination, the operating work, the highest education, the marital status before to go into priesthood, the marital status, the cause of interesting in Buddhism and the cause of relationship with Buddhism which including in this research. It is show that there is not different in opinion for the Buddhist monks role anymore. All priests have agreed with the role in sermon, training and instruction to people at present. The role of good precedence to people and development and to give a helping hand to a community is another way to protect the crime.

In the view of Buddhist monks, we found that the Buddhist monks who were accepted in the theory of Buddhism, have good knowledge in Buddhism, to perform according to doctrine and have good basic knowledge in Buddhism before to go into priesthood will have better role than the Buddhist monks who lack of these qualification.

In the view of the police, who believe in a law of fate and ever been a boy who serves a priest in a monastery before, has accepted and performed according to doctrine regularly will agree and accept the Buddhist monks role in sermon, training instruction, development and to aid to a community in order to be a good precedence better than the police who didn't believe in Buddhism.

RECOMMENDATION

1. It should has the public relations by advertising in radio, television, the press or even in a feature article or poster to disseminate to people to let them know and understand more about Buddhist monks role, for helping and cooperation in the crime protection.
2. The Ministry of the Interior and Ministry of Justice should spread the information out and sending the officers to study in law training course and give knowledge of crime protection to Buddhist monks in order to bring the right knowledge to propagate to people in the right way.
3. The government should concern more about Buddhist monks role by supporting the budget, promotion and value to Buddhist monks and people for the crime protection more than the past.
