

The studying of "The effect of employment mother on offspring"

by studying in case of high school students and the students in level of high school in Bangkok in number of 367 students. Having a purpose to study the essential which expected that having relationship with employment mother on offspring. Which the essential this study into 5 parts are:- 1) The treatment between mother and children. 2) The division of labour within the house of her children. 3) In which the children considering equal of power between parents. 4) In which the children considering the role of women in society and 5) The selection in comprised on occupation of children. By set the hypotheses up on 15 hypotheses. And then conducting to collect data with questioning from the sample of mother and person who answered as questioning of sex, income, educational level, professional, average point, employment mother or not and having or not an employee to conducting hypothesis. By analysis in statistic chi-square on .05 and found that.

1) To study in which concerning about the interaction between mother and child found that for her daughter, her occupation having result. By the mother having occupation in high level and low will treat to children higher than mother in which having moderate occupation level.

2) To study in which concerning the division of labour within the house of her children and found that the children in which the mother having high income, the children are fully responsibility of household less than the mother having a low income. Nevertheless, to have the employee are relationship with children.

3) To study of concerning which her children equality in power between having mother and found that in the daughter or children having high average point, income of mother is high will have to relation this including mother's occupation.

4) To study of concerning with children considering role of women sex in society and found that not having any variable in which is relation at all. Not just to be the employment mother or the level of mother's education.

5) To study of concerning with selection the occupation of children and found that in case of her daughter which the employment mother having income and high education will have the result impacted to select occupation of her children.

As for as concerning research as reflected to look into some problems in which should not bring in to present with the suggestion.