

Editorial

Over a year has passed since the first issue of New Voices in Translation Studies came out. That first issue was made possible thanks to the many submissions for publication of papers presented at the First DCU Postgraduate Conference in Translation Studies. During the last year, and thanks to the impact made by the first issue, a continuous stream of submissions has started to come through our email box, and if it was slow at first, it is quickly gathering momentum now. This has prompted us to make some changes in the way we manage the publication of New Voices. In the first place, we decided to incorporate a new member to our editing team and it is with great pleasure that we announce here that Dr. Charlotte Bosseaux, from the University of Edinburgh, has now joined us as an editor. The second change concerns the way in which individual papers will be published from now on. Rather than publishing all papers at the same time; each year a new issue will be opened with any papers that are, at that stage, ready for publication and other papers will be added to that issue as the year progresses. The issue will be closed when opening the next one and put in the archives six months after closure; the archives will remain accessible only to IATIS members.

Gabriela Saldanha and Marion Winters, December 2006