ASSO. PROF. PRAYAD HONGTONGKUM. 145 pp. ISBN 974-634-746-2

This thesis was to study the efficiency and the degree of services that coped with the public requirements in consequence of the district administrative decentralization of Chiang Mai Municipality.

The study found that the degree of administrative decentralization of Chiang Mai Municipality to all four district offices at present was rather low and their services could not meet the public demands. Although the establishment of the district offices provided latter services to the public they still could not get more convenient and quicker services as expected. Moreover, types and natures of functions and works that Chiang Mai Municipality assigned to the district offices are not fully responsive to the public demands
