

The independent study aim to investigate role of government, Subdistrict Administrative Organization and role of people in Subdistrict development planning process.

The qualitative methodology is used for this study. Data were collected and analysis from documentary and interviewing concerned people in 2002 Takhian Pom Subdistrict Administrative Organization development plan and participant observation.

The study finds that.

1. Government has influential role in Subdistrict Administrative Organization development planing process. The main factors comprised of centralize administration structure, implementing concept and development administration was top-down. Relationship between government, Subdistrict Administrative Organization and people were taking order from government.

2. Role of Subdistrict Administrative Organization was conveyed by government in institutional building and government command. Development aims to reach official mission on duty and role rather than problem oriented and managing resource for solving problem.

3. Role of people was dominated by government. The attempt for establishing people organization participation in development and adjust development administration relevant to social problem were failure. Government and community leader took a leading role rather than majority people in community.
