The Thai Buddhist order ecclesiastics, consists of The Supreme Patriarch, The Sangha Council of Thailand and The Ecclesiastic Governors, there are so called administrative organization of Sangha. Their powers come from The Sangha Act and its supporting rules. But the administrative powers of Thai Sangha differ from ordinary administrative organization that can be judged in Administrative Court. So this thesis' objective is to study the procedures in protection of individual rights against administrative acts and order issued by the Buddhist organization which divided into internal and external procedures.

The research results that the internal protection procedures of Sangha lacks of clear provision and jurisdiction covering Buddhist monks and the householder 's right in opposing administrative acts and orders issued by Sangha organization affecting them in the external matters. So this thesis' focus is on jurisdiction of The Administrative Court over this matters. And also the researcher found that there are no clear provisions for Administrative Court in Checking Administrative power of The Buddhist order.

So the researcher suggested that there should be some ordinary rules and regulation governing the opposing of the administrative regulation of the Buddhist order 's procedures in Administrative Court. The researcher also recommended that there should be a clear rule about Jurisdiction of Administrative Court in checking administrative power of the Buddhist order and a precedent of Administrative Court in the acceptance of the cases concerning administrative power of the Buddhist order.
